Hondo missed a rain Thursday by only a few miles. A heavy cloud gathered east and south about mid-afternoon, and for a while it looked like a fine rain was certain. The clouds, however, soon dissolved leaving Hondo still dry. A fine rain is reported on the Chick Morris farm on the lower Hondo, at the Ray Taylor farm four miles southwest and as far as the Seco School house northwest, making almost a half-moon circle around us. At some points the rain was sufficient to run creeks and fill water holes. As we go rushing to press Friday appearances are favorable for rain.

Garrett's Comedians gave a three-night dramatic and vaudeville entertainment under canvas here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The show was poorly attended and the actors, most of whom appeared to be amateurs, labored under a consciousness of lack of appreciation. However, there was plenty of clean wholesome humor and three entertaining little dramas presented and on the whole the show was deserving in every way of a much better support than it received.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rothe had as their guests over the Easter holidays their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Reinhart Rothe. Mr. Rothe is an employee of the State Highway Department and stationed at Corrigan in Polk County. This is their first visit home since the young couple's recent marriage, and was a pleasant event for all concerned.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Oklahoma

RAY LYMAN WILBUR, SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR OF THE UNITED STATES, SAYS:

"Did you ever stop to think what a flower garden means? Flower are perhaps useless, they last but for a little while, and yet their presence about a home gives it a recognized character. We cannot eat them, we can only see them and smell them. We gather them for weddings and birthdays. We place them about our dead. Their one great value is beauty."

"It is the love of beauty and the recognition of it by bringing it to our doorsteps that separates us off from the beasts. It is this love of beauty, it is the values associated with it that connect us up with the Divine."

"A flower garden costs but little but it means much. A few seeds, a little dirt, a little energy, some water, a box in the window or soil about the house, and our children can learn to understand life, to love color, to appreciate order, and to admire beauty, AND OUR NEIGHBORS AND THE STRANGER PASSING BY CAN GET A BIT OF HAPPINESS AND CHEER."

TWO FIRES THIS WEEK.

Hondo is in a fair way to lose her good fire rating with two fires in one week.

A barn at the August Horning place burned Tuesday afternoon. It is presumed that it caught from a trash fire nearby, and the building, which was a small one, and most of its contents were destroyed.

The fire company responded to the alarm and protected the adjoining buildings from the flames.

About 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening the fire alarm sounded again. This time it was the combined wash house and garage at the Pete Jungman home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jungman were away from home and the flames had attained such headway when discovered that it was impossible to save the building or any of its contents. It took some time to lay the firehose, as it had to come several blocks, and water was secured just in time to save the residence. The whole side of the building next to the burning structure was smoking and seemed ready to burst into flames when the firehose went into action.

The origin of the fire is a mystery as Mr. and Mrs. Jungman had been gone for several hours and no one else had had any occasion to go into the building, and there had been no fire in or about the wash furance since Monday.

Mr. Jungman estimates his loss at about a thousand dollars, and there was no insurance.

SENIORS PREPARING PLAY.

The Senior Class of the Hondo High School, under the direction of the class sponsor, Miss Bess Brucks, is busily engaged in rehearsing the class play, "Nothing But the Truth." The play is a three-act comedy of American business life. The following members of the class have been assigned parts in the play: Regina Nester, Dorothy Moffield, Lucille Boon, Christina Taylor, Dorothy Ulrich, Meta Gerdes, Ulbrich Burger, Charley Leinweber, Victor Murray, Clarence Wright and Leo Pettis. Mary Ruth Cameron has been appointed as publicity chairman for the play and is planning many novel methods of advertising the play.

COUNTY COUNCIL IN SESSION HERE.

The Annual meeting of the Medina County P. T. A. Council is being held at the High School Auditorium today.

The delegates are to be guests of the local Parent-Teacher Association at a luncheon at eleven o'clock. An interesting program has been arranged for the day. There will be several addresses by prominent out-of-town speakers and local talent will furnish an entertainment consisting of readings, vocal and instrumental solos, orchestra and glee club numbers.

The main feature of the day will be the election of officers for 1930-31.

CLOTHING INSURANCE.

Moth proofing is your only hope. You know what the moths can do and did do. What happened to you once can happen again. Jennings knows this because he repairs clothes damaged by the moth. Sometimes clothes are past repairing and besides this repairing costs you more for one hole than cleaning the garment and even two garments. Jennings has a sure shot formula. Moth proofing was started several years ago and in no one case has the moth ever made its attack. Cedarized moth proof bags are furnished customers at Jennings.

E. P. HEARNE DEAD.

Death claimed another old citizen of Hondo when Mr. E. P. Hearne passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. E. Beal, in San Antonio, about 1 A. M. Friday, April 18, 1930, after an illness of several months with paralysis.

The body was brought to Hondo by the Horgan Funeral Directors, prepared for burial and interment made in Oakwood cemetery Friday afternoon. Revs. M. Williamson and Albert Nelson conducted the funeral services.

Mr. Hearne was born March 14, 1854, and was 76 years and four days of age at the time of his demise. He had been twice married. His first marriage was to Miss Josephine Hancock in 1881. She died in 1886, leaving three children. In 1889 he was married to Miss Carrie Bratton. She died in 1901, leaving four children. All but three of his children preceded him in death. The survivors are: Mrs. D. E. Beal of San Antonio, Mrs. L. J. McCall of College Station and Mrs. S. G. Carter of Rock Springs.

He moved to Hondo about the time of the death of his second wife in 1891, and his family grew up and the children married in this community.

Mr. Hearne joined the Methodist church in early life and remained a consistent member throughout the rest of a long life. He was a good man, a worthy citizen and a friend and neighbor who died mourned and respected by all who knew him.

TWO POPULAR YOUNG PEOPLE MARRY.

Mr. Otis Schuehle and Miss Mary Crouch surprised their friends here by getting married at Alice Thursday night, April 24, 1930.

Mr. Schuehle, who is the eldest son of Sheriff and Mrs. Charles J. Schuehle, is a musician of considerable talent and for some time has been a member of the Orchestra in Grandi Brothers Stock Company. The company is showing at Alice this week.

Mrs. Schuehle is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crouch, is a graduate of Hondo High School and has been a popular favorite in the town since her early childhood.

The Anvil Herald joins a large circle of friends in wishing the young couple a happy and prosperous wedded life.

MOTH PROOFING.

This starts Monday, April 28, and will continue for a week, very attractive prices have been fixed for cleaning and moth proofing winter garments. Send your suits, dresses, overcoats, wraps, knit goods and furs. The cost is little and will save you many times the special price charged for moth proofing. Mrs. A. H. Schweers concluded the program by a paper on the plot and characters of the same novel. The Club decided to have the social meeting the following week.

TEXAS & TEXANS

TEXAS AND TEXANS.

By Will H. Mayes.
"All Texans for All Texas"

Improving Texas Ports
Nearly $5,000,000 will be appropriated by Congress for the improvement of Texas ports, to be available after July 1, 1931, if the favorably reported Rivers and Harbors omnibus bill is adopted. Of this, $2,168,000 will be expended on the $5,000,000 Brownsville-Point Isabel project, giving these towns a channel to the Gulf, with suitable turning basins. The Corpus Christi-Aransas channel will get $515,000 for new construction and $249,000 for annual maintenance. The Texas City channel will get $656,500 for improvement and for building dikes. The kinks are to be straightened out of the Houston Ship Channel and the channel widened at a cost of $945,000. The Freeport harbor gets $75,000 for annual maintenance. A survey of the Trinity river to Fort Worth is authorized in the general appropriation bill, to determine the best way to make it navigable. Texas ports and riverways are of sufficient importance to merit the most favorable consideration of Congress.

Seductive Publicity
One of the strangest things about a larger part of the Texas press, the State loyalty of which can not be doubted, is that so many papers pay high prices for and give most favorable positions to copy so largely devoted to boosting New York, Florida and California. In one column of the kind a statement appeared not long ago under a California date line, that inhabitants of the central States should hurry to make enough money to be able to spend the rest of their lives in Southern California. Column after column is printed in Texas papers every day pointing out the allurements of New York life. High-pressure, high-priced publicity writers, adepts in word painting, are building fortunes by being able to tuck seductive publicity into the news and editorial pages of the country's papers, for which papers appear willing enough to pay.

Texas Building Stone
A Del Rio stone quarry is shipping $150,000 worth of Texas stone to an import company at Los Angeles. The same quarry has orders for 100 cars of stone to go into a Houston office building, a $150,000 order for the new Texas and Pacific station at Fort Worth, and $200,000 order for the Southern Pacific station at Houston. Texas has fine granite, marble and stone enough to erect all the buildings that go up in the country and in sufficient varieties to please the most exacting requirements.

Texas Ranch Improvements
One of the most noticeable classes of improvements being made in Texas now is in ranch homes. A few years back ranch owners were satisfied with almost any kind of shelter, many of which could hardly be called homes. It is not unusual now to find ranches and farms with homes as good and as well equipped as in the cities. City people in increasing numbers are buying ranches and farms, especially in the hill country of West Texas, and building pretentious summer homes on them. Homes in the suburbs of Texas cities, on extensive acreage, are more expensively built now than those in downtown districts. People who can afford it are seeking homes in the quiet of the open spaces rather than in the crowded marts where life is often almost intolerable.

Texas Race Horses
Houghton Brownlee, who lives in Austin and has a ranch in Burnet county, has recently sold a two-year-old filly for $15,000. Brownlee believes that the Texas climate, Texas grass and Texas water are the best in the world for development of fast horses, and he is one of a number of Texans who is proving it. He says it costs little more to breed a $15,000 thoroughbred than a $15 plug. One has to have a love for fine horses, though, to do it, and the successful horseman always loves his horses almost as much as he does his own

REAL ESTATE BUSINESS CHANGES.

The partnership heretofore existing between this writer and Dr. O. B. Taylor under the name of the Hondo Land Company has been dissolved by Dr. Taylor's withdrawal from the Company to engage in business alone. The partnership had no liabilities and this writer will continue to operate the business under the name of the Hondo Land Company.

In this connection, it gives us pleasure to announce that the place made vacant by Dr. Taylor's withdrawal has been accepted by Mr. Geo. H. Kimmey and he will be a full partner in the Company so long as the arrangement is mutually agreeable. Mr. Kimmey is without experience in the real estate business, but is a capable man of varied experience in other lines and is fully family. Few Texans know that there are millions of dollars invested in thoroughbred horses in Texas, that numerous Texas-bred horses are prize winners on the best tracks of the country and that interest in Texas horses is constantly increasing.

Looking for Other Caverns
The cavern discovered near Richland Springs is getting much notice from the Texas press and Texans are watching for reports of further explorations. A. H. Dunlay, of the Texas Board of Water Engineers, is going on an exploration trip out in Culbertson county, near the New Mexico caves, hoping to find caverns that will equal that at Carlsbad, which is known to extend into Texas. His hopes are based largely on the complete disappearance of a creek in that section, which he believes has eaten out colossal caves, as in the case with Carlsbad Cavern.

Smell the Onions!
Trainloads of Texas onions, than which Bermuda never grew better, are now going north every day. Laredo was long the leading onion shipping section, but now has a strong rival in Raymondville, down in the Valley. Onion growing on a large scale is being extended to Central, East and North Texas, from which the onion crops are marketed later in the season. Raymondville celebrated its first onion shipments of the year with an "Onion Fiesta," attended by 10,000 people.

Clay Products Plant
McAllen is at work to secure a large clay products plant, which would utilize the kaolin deposits on a large tract south of Reynosa. The firm with which negotiations are being made manufactures bath tubs, kitchen sinks, chinaware and pottery. Attorneys are securing options on sites, and it is believed the plant will soon be established.

Dallas Wants Centennial
The Dallas News states that considerable interest is being shown at Dallas over the proposed Texas Centennial and that a committee will be appointed to study the proposal to use the Texas State Fair Park as a nucleus for the exposition.

Oil Wells Increase
In March, 395 oil wells were brought in in Texas and 47 gas wells. These were scattered over practically every section of the State, with Throckmorton, Wichita and Young counties leading in the order named. Large quantity production was obtained in many of them. It seems that about all that is required to secure oil in paying quantities almost anywhere in Texas is to drill deep enough.

How Many Hens?
A Rockdale business man is quoted by the Reporter as saying that with 200 thoroughbred hens, properly fed and cared for, no farmer need ever execute a mortgage lien on his crop or team. Less than $100.00 is required to buy baby chicks, build the required housing, and bring a flock of that size to the laying age. Even the suburban citizen can have enough acreage for such a flock.

Moulton Poultry Pays
According to the Moulton Eagle, buyers at Moulton paid $18,402 for eggs in March at the average of 20 cents a dozen. February purchases were $13,512. The farmers who are complaining least of hard times in Texas are those who are giving most attention to milk and poultry production.

Radish Harvest Pictures
Moving picture houses in Texas and other states are showing pictures of radish harvesting and shipping at Odem, in Nueces county, where 2,000 harvesters were engaged in gathering and packing radishes on one farm. One picture of this kind does more to advertise Texas favorably than all the 10 gallon hats of the movie cowboys.

Prizes for Farm Papers
At least one chamber of commerce in Texas—at Junction, it is believed—is offering prizes for the best papers by farmers telling how they make profits on farm crops in 1930. A good idea that might be used elsewhere.

competent to handle his part of the work.

We hope to render the public an efficient service in handling your real estate wants along the lines we have pursued during the past twenty years and when you want to buy or sell farms, ranches or town property anywhere see Mr. Kimmey, phone 172, or this writer at the printing office.

CHEVROLETS IN INDIA.

The old adage, "It's a man's world," is fast becoming obsolete even in Turkey where feminine rights, as such, have only recently begun to receive attention. There are few fields that seem less fitted for women, even in the western world, than that of taxi-driver yet in Constantinople a young convent-bred girl recently proclaimed her emancipation

DIED.

Mr. John Franger, aged about 79 years, died at his home here Friday night after a lingering illness and great suffering and was laid to rest at St. Louis Catholic Cemetery Saturday evening. Rev. Father Lenzen performed the last sad rites.

Deceased was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, October 21, 1851. He was happily married to Miss Regina Zuercher of D'hamis. Their union was blessed with three children. They are John Franger, Jr., Mrs. Nic I. Tschirhart of San Antonio and Miss Helen Franger of this place. Besides his aged wife and fatherless children deceased is survived by several grandchildren, one step brother, Mr. Mike Franger of LaCoste, and a large number of other near and dear relatives to mourn his demise. A large cortege of mourning friends and relatives escorted the remains to their last resting place. We join this entire community in sympathy with the bereaved and grief-stricken ones. May he rest in peace.

And Children.

by taking a chauffeur's test and embarking on a career of taxi-driving.

Mouamer Hanoum was just eighteen years of age when she started Constantinople by announcing her intention of taking a chauffeur's course. She subsequently passed the severe physical examination and, in a business-like manner asserted that she was prepared to enter the driver's tests. She displayed such unusual skill at the wheel that she completed her course in record time and captured highest honors.

At a full-fledged taxi-chauffeur, Miss Mouamer's first consideration was the choice of her vehicle. She selected a Chevrolet six which has been specially equipped for taxi work. She is now happily employed driving passengers around the Turkish capital and enjoying the distinction of being the first woman to enter the chauffeur's profession in that country.

Work of Early Farmers Recognized

Styles in ships have changed greatly since the first commercial credit for laying the foundation of the modern soil-improvement program which have proved so successful in raising the yields and profits of our farms.

It is shown by the experience of our farmers, now past middle age, who have volunteered information in their states. Some of these have been using fertilizers annually for quarter of a century, one farmer in South Carolina reports that he first used nitrate of soda in 1875.

part of the 100th anniversary of the nitrate of soda in this country, an award in the form of a diploma is to be conferred upon a farmer in each state who has used fertilizer for the longest period of time. This award is being given by the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational Bureau. Letters from farmers are reaching the office of the Educational Bureau daily and the awards will be made this fall.

"Four generations of Southern farmers have used commercial fertilizers during the past 100 years," says Herbert C. Brewer, director of the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational Bureau, "but efficient soil-building practices were not understood generally until the last quarter century. It remained for our educational agencies, such as the extension services of the state agricultural colleges, to popularize the practices which could be depended upon to assure the most economic production. At present, thousands of farmers are doing daily what only a few of the most enterprising did a half century ago."

Pioneer Fertilizer Mined on Barren Lands in Chile

Production to United States in 1830 Marked First Use of Commercial Fertilizer.

The first hundred years in the use of commercial fertilizers can now be recorded in the agricultural history of the United States. A practice of using commercial fertilizer was started in 1830 when the first shipment of nitrate of soda was brought to this country. At that time only lime and marl of organic substances now common used for agricultural purposes known to the early farmers, continuously since that time, nitrate of soda, or Chilean nitrate, as is commonly called, is now recognized as the oldest of the present commercial fertilizers.

Though nitrate of soda has become commonplace article on farms about the country, it is not generally known that one of the romances of modern civilization is woven around fertilizer. It is a product of a desert, high in the Andes of northern Chile. There is an arid vegetation in the entire zone, which occupies a region as large as the combined area of New York and Pennsylvania. Not a drop of glass springs from the soil, which is one of the most infertile in the world. The most important fertilizing compounds known here.

Nitrate ore is found at various depths below the surface, the average about three feet. It varies in content from 5 to 70 per cent sodium. Open-cut mining is practiced in removing the ore, after which it is transported to a refining plant erected near by on the desert. The refining of the ore is an extremely technical process. The objective of the operations, however, is to remove the impurities from the ore and to concentrate the sodium nitrate so that when ready for shipment the fertilizer contains 95 to 99 per cent sodium nitrate and analyzes 15.5 per cent nitrogen. Iodine, which is also present in the ore, is a by-product of the refining process. Small quantities of this element are found in the fertilizer, as are also traces of boron and magnesium.

Conservative estimates by geologists and engineers in Chile indicate that the deposits are of sufficient size to supply the needs of the world for generations to come.

Red Letter Events Found in American Agriculture

1830—Nitrate of soda introduced into United States. In point of service, nitrate from Chile is exceeded only by lime and marl of the inorganic substances now used for farm purposes.

1842—Laves in England took out patent for making superphosphate. Since that time phosphate deposits have been discovered in our southern states and in Africa.

1860—Potash from German mines first utilized for farm purposes.

New Methods Adopted in Chilean Industry

Application of Nitrate Fertilizer in Sun-Parched Desert Is Speeded Up.

AMERICAN engineers are helping to revolutionize an industry up in the sun-parched mountains of Chile.

The application of modern methods in the nitrate industry is making the century efficiency, according to Rios Gallardo, former Chilean minister of State, who was a recent visitor to the United States before being his country's ambassador to the United States.

With the elimination of waste and the use of labor-saving machinery, a decrease, he said, has been made in the cost of producing the nitrate under the difficult conditions in the arid desert.

Before the nitrate industry was as strong a position as it is today," declared Ambassador Rios. "Not only have the mechanical processes been vastly improved, but the production has been stabilized to the benefit of both the producers and the consumers of this fertilizer."

The Chilean Government has taken energetic part in the improvement of the industry. It has aided the industry through legislative enactment and has encouraged new American processes for mining and refining the fertilizer.

At present nearly one-half of the total capital invested in the industry is owned in the United States, pointed out the Ambassador. American farmers are also the largest users of Chilean nitrate, their consumption during the past five years averaging about 1,000,000 tons annually.

The nitrate fertilizer was first shipped to this country in 1830. It has been used ever since, and today it occupies the honor of being the oldest of the commercial fertilizers.

A THOUGHT FOR THE DAY.

by Amos R. Wells

SOWING GRASS SEED.

When a gardener sows grass seed, he watches eagerly to see whether it is going to "catch" or not. If it "catches" it fructifies, it sends its tiny roots down into the soil and its tiny blades up into the air, and soon the bare ground is covered with a carpet of lovely green. But if it does not "catch," the seed is dead and wasted, and the whole process is to be gone over again.

The hearing of sermons and the reading of good books and the perusal of the Bible is often a process of not catching. There is no germination. The ground has been packed hard by the feet of worldly interests. There has been no softening rain of divine grace. The hot sun of passion and greed has baked the soil. It has been impossible for any seed to "catch."

We are likely to find fault with the seed. It is no good, we say. The florist is a fraud. We'll try some other dealer next time. But often there is no next time. For the sowing of grass is not as easy matter, and few realize how much care and practical wisdom are required. We go at it haphazard, any way, any time, any soil. No wonder so many lawns are bare and straggling.

"When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understand it not, then cometh the evil one, and snatcheth away that which hath been sown in his heart."

KEEP YOUR SOIL PRODUCTIVE.

By P. G. Holden,

Field Director, Agricultural Extension Department International Harvester Company.

From 70 to 85 per cent of the fertilizing elements, such as nitrogen, phosphorus and potash taken from the soil by crops are returned to the soil if the crops are fed to animals and the manure put back on the land. It is well to remember that manure represents fertility which has been taken from the soil by crops and must be returned to it if productivity is to be maintained. It not only adds to the store of plant food in the soil by returning a large per cent of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash removed by crops, but it also renders the native plant food of the soil more available. It improves its physical condition, makes it warm and enables it to receive and retain more moisture, lets air into the soil, aids in the development of bacteria and helps to prevent washing.

No Substitute for Manure

No substitute at present known is capable of completely filling the place of farm manure. Notwithstanding its great value there is probably no material on the farm in which so great and needless waste occurs. It is a common sight in almost any section to see stables and feed lots situated upon the bank of a stream or ditch where the most valuable portion of the manure will pass into the stream.

There is no soil so fertile that its producing power cannot be eventually exhausted by continued cropping which takes fertility and returns nothing. We must not forget that the manure crop does not belong to the farmer, but to the soil, and must be returned to the soil.

On many farms it appears as though well-laid plans had been carried out for wasting stable manure. Manure is lost by weathering, leaching, heating, rotting, by piling in heaps in the field and letting stand before spreading. If you cannot spread it soon after it is produced, store it in a pit or manure shed. Don't pile it in heaps in the field.

Of all the ways in which manure is handled, piling it in heaps in the field is the most wasteful. It is even worse than leaving it under the barn eaves and letting it leach out there, because of the waste of labor involved in hauling it to the field to be thrown away.

A SEA SCOUT.

From: Boy Scout of America, 2 Park Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

When the ships of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition arrive in the United States in June, one of the most interesting members will be Sea Scout Paul A. Siple, of Erie, Pa., youngest of the party, who has won highest commendation from Admiral Byrd for the work he has done since the expedition left New York nearly two years ago.

Praised By Chief

Sea Scout Paul A. Siple, of Erie, Pa., youngest member of Byrd Antarctic Expedition has been commended by the Admiral for outstanding achievements.

Information to this effect was contained in a letter received by Scout Executive H. B. Palmer from the National Scout offices in New York.

Sea Scout Siple, who is an Eagle Scout, the highest rank which a Scout may obtain was selected from among thousands of Boy Scouts at the invitation of then Commander Byrd to be his personal aide. He sailed away from New York, on August 25, 1928, the most envied job in America, with a man-sized job to fill on one of the greatest exploration expeditions of all time. On December 2, 1928, Siple, with the others of the husky group comprising the expedition party said goodbye and left Dunedin, New Zealand, the last port of call enroute to Antarctica.

Much has come back over the radio of what the expedition was doing as a whole, but little concerning any individuals, except the leaders. There have been only a few words, from time to time, of what the Sea Scout was doing during the fourteen bleak months on the ice. Such messages as did come through however, were all to the effect that Siple had made good splendidly. But it was left for Admiral Byrd to sum up the Sea Scout's accomplishments a few days ago in a radio message to the Boy Scouts of America, as follows:

"Sea Scout Paul A. Siple took up his work in the expedition as a man among men. He stood regular deck watches on shipboard and turned himself into an able seaman on a full-rigged sailing vessel.

"At the base he was given a dog team to drive and soon learned to handle the dogs like a sordough and soon went out on the trail. Paul was given the young pups to train and turned out a most useful team that answered many calls for odd jobs around camp. As zoologist he has worked diligently in getting specimens of Antarctic bird and animal life spending many hours in cleaning and preserving the skins. He has also done good work in taking depth soundings in the Bay of Whales and has been a keen observer on his many pup team trips on the bay ice of animal life and of ice conditions. Along with the rest he has taken his turn at menial tasks such as shoveling snow, house duties, kitchen police and standing night watches. Paul is now on the whaler "Larsen" enroute to Wellington in charge of live penguins that we are making an effort to bring back to the states and will rejoin ship in New Zealand." (Signed) Byrd.

Siple has since returned to Dunedin from Wellington where he had charge of stowing the penguins aboard the whaler "C. A. Larsen" for the trip to the United States. At Dunedin he was royally welcomed by the Dunedin Boy Scouts headed by District Commissioner W. F. Meek.

On March 23, "City of New York" weighed anchor with Siple aboard as an able seaman. About April 14, the ship will stop at PaPeete, Tahiti to take on coal and for necessary repairs. After a few days at Tahiti, the "City of New York" accompanied by the "Eleanor Bolling" second ship of the expedition, will cross the Pacific to the Panama Canal. This is the longest stretch on the homeward voyage, a distance of 4,500 miles. Arriving at the Canal Zone, Siple will see and be greeted by the first American Scouts and Sea Scouts he has seen in many months. The several Scout Troops and two Sea Scout Units are already planning a reception in his honor under Major R. A. Wheeler, President, and Scout Commissioner J. A. Klemmer, of the Canal Zone Council, Boy Scouts of America.

The final leg of the voyage is a 2,211 mile journey from the Canal Zone to New York.

MRS. ALFRED WIEMERS INJURED.

On last Sunday morning while Mr.
and Mrs. Alfred Wiemers were on their way to church services at Yan-cey, something went wrong with the radius rod on their car, causing Mr.
which turned over. Mrs. Wiemers was Wiemers to lose control of the car seriously hurt. She was brought to the Hondo hospital where an x-ray was taken and it was found that she had sustained a fractured hip. She was taken to San Antonio Monday for further attention. Mr. Wiemers was only slightly injured.

servicing. I will please you in service,
price and quality of goods.

A. H. BENDELE,
Proprietor

O. S. T. Service Station on the Highway.

It is our desire to serve Hondo water in a manner that will just-commendation instead of condemnation by our consumers. However is going to take some time to make all of the adjustments and improvements that are either necessary advisable in Hondo, and we earnestly solicit your co-operation in our effort to give Hondo a first-class water system.

We are, at the present time,
installing meters to eliminate waste water. To do this it is necessary the Company to require a Security Deposit by each consumer—such posit to be returned at the time the vice is discontinued—and an annual interest payment at the rate of
(6) per cent will be made.

A meter does a number of things for a water system. It eliminates wasting of water, and fixes charges on the people who use water.

There has been for some time difference in rates for different summers. We are, at this time, making an attempt to eliminate any possibility of discrimination by fixing basic rate of two dollars, and five cents ($2.50) for all. Twenty-cents (25c) to be deducted from bills paid on or before the 10th each month. This is for a minimum of three thousand gallons. Water used in excess of three thousand gallons will be at the rate of fifty (50) per thousand gallons for the next seven thousand, and thirty-cents (35c) per thousand thereafter.

All water bills are to be paid the First National Bank during first ten days of each month. After the 10th, the local manager will collect.

We are pleased to have associated with us, Mr. Homer Wilson as manager, who will be glad to help you with your water problems.

We want to be considered as a part of your city. Your problems are our problems and we want to help.

CALLING BACK OLD TIMES.

Appropos of our reference last week to being just thirty years since we went our way into the newspaper business with the purchase, on Good day, 1900, of The Anvil at Cas- ville, Judge H. E. Haass dug up in his files three copies of The of that time. The copies bear of April 13, 1900, the last is- under the former management; of 20, 1900, the initial issue under present management, and another of one of May 4, 1900.

The paper was a six-column folio, outside pages printed at home on Washington Hand Press and the inside pages by the Western newspaper Union in Houston.

The advertisements of Jos. Cou- of Castroville, S. Wolfson of Antonio, the Southern Pacific road and the San Antonio Brew- Association occupy prominent on the front page. The other are on the last page. It is a able fact, and a striking illustra- of how rapidly things change, every business firm represented the advertising columns has either ed out of existence entirely or completely changed in name and agement.

County politics opened up earlier year than it has been doing in years, a long string of an- cements appearing in our initial of April 20. Among them was announcement of August Hor- for Commissioner of the Cas- ville precinct in oppositon to Tschhart. The fee of $2.50 by Mr. Hornung for this an- cement was the first money col- ed by us as a newspaper publish-which we enter the game, young, hopeful but inexperienced though with a well-fixed purpose to serve, we close with a reprint from our initial issue of our—

Salutatory.

In assuming the proprietorship of "THE ANVIL" we feel that we will have the hearty co-operation of the public. Every town needs a news- paper. Castroville has the oldest one in Medina County. Where one has been so liberally supported in the past, there is surely hope for the future.

The change in proprietorship will work no radical change in the policy of the paper. It will continue to be issued regularly on Friday in the same form that has so long been familiar to its readers. Its columns will be open to any news and the reasonable use of any party. But the editorial expressions will be the editor's own and he reserves the right of commending or criticising any person or thing that may be subject to editorial comment. In short, our policy is independent.

Trusting that we will have the sup- port of all the friends of the old management and hoping to find many new ones, we will say that we are here with you to earn an honest livli- hood by giving you the very best paper our means and ability will per- mit.

Respectfully,
FLETCHER DAVIS,
Editor.

MAJOR LAMM RECEIVES INTER- ESTING LETTER.

Major Lamm this week received a letter from B. T. Eley, and old Con- federate comrade still residing at the Major's boyhood home, Union Springs, Alabama, or rather the point from which he enlisted in the Confederate Army.

Accompanying the letter is a copy of the Union Springs Herald of April 17, 1930, containing a copy of the roster of the Major's company of 100 men, rank and file, as printed in the Southern Home Journal, in June 1861, at the time it was mustered into the Confederate service.

According to the roster, the Major was 19 years of age at his time of enlistment, and was from Silver- smith, Muscogee County Georgia, just across the state line; hence, though a Georgian, he served through the war with the Alabama troops. He participated in some of the hardest fought battles of the war under Lee in Virginia, and many of his com- rades never came back.

We quote the old gentleman's let- ter in full:

Union Springs, Ala.,
April 18, 1930.

Hon. A. M. Lamm, Hondo, Texas.
Dear Comrade:

It has bene quite a while since you have had any tidings from me but I have not forgotten you, nor the many other comrades that inlisted with you in the Southern Rifles in the long ago. On the 6th day of this month I entered on the 89th year of my life and thankful of still good health.

I am sending you today under sep- arate cover a copy of Union Springs Herald containing a roster of The Southern Rifles which was published in The Southern Home Journal, a newspaper then printed here, in June 1861 soon after the company enlist- ed in the Confederate service. I notice on the roster the name Angus Lamb, which I suppose is meant for you. I do not know of any other member of that Company living ex- cept yourself, nor but one other of my Company left except myself. This roster was furnished by a daughter of Capt. John McGowen, who later in the service became Capt. of the Southern Rifles.

If you have not already a list of these old Comrades I feel sure you will be pleased to have the copy I am sending you today with the best wishes for your continued welfare and happiness from

Your old comrade and friend,
B. T. ELEY.

ZEN of the Y. D.

A Novel of the Foothills

By ROBERT STEAD

Author of "The Cow Rancher" — "The Homesteaders" — "Neighbors," etc.

"The ranch buildings are safe enough, I think," said Transley. "The grass there is close cropped, and there is some plowing."

For a moment the three sat, watching the spread of the flames. By this time the whole lower valley was blanketed in smoke. Clouds of blue and mauve and creamy yellow rolled from the meadows and stacks. The fire was whipping the light breeze of the afternoon to a gale, and was already running wildly over the flanks of the foothills.

"Well, I'm off," said Zen. "Good-bye!"

"Be careful, Zen!" her father shouted. "Fire is fire." But already her horse was stretching low and straight in a hard gallop down the valley.

"I'll ride in to camp and tell Tompkins to make up a double supply of sandwiches and coffee," said Transley. "I guess there'll be no cooking in Landson's outfit this afternoon, after that we can both run down and lend a hand, if that suits you."

As they rode to camp together Y.D. drew up close to the contractor. "Transley," he said, "how do you reckon that fire started?"

"I don't know," said Transley, "any more than you do."

"I didn't ask you what you knew. I asked you what you reckoned."

Transley rode for some minutes in silence. Then at last he spoke: "A man isn't supposed to reckon in things of this kind. He should know, or keep his mouth shut. But I allow myself just one guess. Drakz."

"Why Drakz?" Y.D. demanded. "He has nothin' to gain, and this prank may put him in the cooler."

"Drakz would do anything to be spectacular," Transley explained. "He probably will boast openly about it. You know, he's trying to make an impression on Zen."

"Nonsense!"

"Of course it's nonsense, but Drakz doesn't see it that way."

"I'd string him to the nearest cottonwood if I thought he—"

"Now don't do him an injustice. Y.D. Drakz doesn't realize that he is no mate for Zen. He doesn't know of any reason why Zen shouldn't look on him with favor; indeed, with pride. It's ridiculous, I know, but Drakz is built that way."

"Then I'll change his style of architecture the first time I run into him," said Y.D. savagely. "Zen is too young to think of such a thing, anyway."

"She will always be too young to think of such a thing, so far as Drakz or his type is concerned," Transley returned. "But suppose—Y.D., to be quite frank, suppose I suggested—"

"Transley, you work quick," said Y.D. "I admit I like a quick worker."

They Had Gone Only a Few Hundred Yards When Y.D. Pulled His Horse to a Stop.

But just now we have a fire on our hands."

By this time they had reached the camp. Transley gave his instructions in a few words, and then turned to ride down to Landson's. They had gone only a few hundred yards when Y.D. pulled his horse to a stop.

"Transley!" he exclaimed, and his voice was shaking. "What do you smell?"

The contractor drew up and sniffed the air. When he turned to Y.D. his face was white.

"Smoke, Y.D.," he gasped. "The wind has changed!"

It was true. Already low clouds of smoke were drifting overhead like a broken veil. The erratic foothill wind, which a few minutes before had been coming down the valley, was now blowing back up again. Even while they took in the situation they could feel the hot breath of the distant fire borne against their faces.

"Well, it's up to us," said Transley tersely. "We'll make a fight of it. Got any speed in that nag of yours?" Without waiting for an answer he put spurs to his horse and set forward on a wild gallop into the smoke.

A mile down the line he found that Linder had already gathered his forces and laid out a plan of defense. The valley, from the South Y.D. to the hills, was about four miles wide, and up the full breadth of it was now coming the fire from Landson's fields. There was no natural fighting line; Linder had not so much as a buffalo path to work against. But he was already starting back-fires at intervals of fifty yards, allotting three men to each fire. A back-fire is a fire started for the purpose of stopping another. Usually a road, or a plowed strip, or even a cattle path, is used for a base. On the windward side of this base the back-fire is started and allowed to eat its way back against the wind until it meets the main fire which is rushing forward with the wind, and chokes it out for lack of fuel. A few men, stationed along a furrow or a trail, can keep the small back-fire from jumping it, although they would be powerless to check the momentum of the main fire.

This was Linder's position, except that he had no furrow to work against. All he could do was tell off men with sacks and horse blankets soaked in the barrels of water to hold the back-fire in check as best they could. So far they were succeeding. As soon as the fire had burned a few feet the forward side of it was pounded out with wet sacks. It didn't matter about the other side. It could be allowed to eat back as far as it liked; the farther the better.

"Good boy, Lin!" Transley shouted, as he drew up and surveyed operations. "She played us a dirty trick, didn't she?"

Linder looked up, red-eyed and coughing. "We can hold it here," he said. "But we can never cross the valley. The fire will be on us before we have burned a mile. It will beat around our south flank and lick up everything!"

Transley jumped from his horse. He seized Linder in his arms and literally threw him into the saddle. "You're played, boy!" he shouted in his foreman's ear. "Ride down to the river and get into the water, and stay there until you know we can win!"

Then Transley threw himself into the fight. As the men said afterwards, Linder fought like a wildcat, but Transley fought like a den of lions. When the wagon galloped up from the river with barrels of water Transley seized a barrel at the end and set it bodily on the ground. He sprang into the wagon, shouting commands to horses and men. A hundred yards they galloped along the fighting front; then Transley sprang out and set another barrel on the ground. In this way, instead of having the men all coming to the wagon to wet their sacks, he distributed water along the line. Then they turned back, picked up the empty barrels, and galloped to the river for a fresh supply. Soon they had the first mile secure. The back-fires had all met; the forward line of flames had all been pounded out; the rear line had burned back until there was no danger of it jumping the burned space. Then Transley picked up his kit and rushed it on to a new front farther south. At intervals of a hundred yards he started dres, holding them in check and beating out the western edge as before.

But his difficulties were increasing. He was farther from the river. It took longer to get water. One of the barrels fell off and collapsed. Some of the men were playing out. The horses were wild with excitement and terror. The smoke was growing denser and hotter. Men were coughing and gasping through dry, seared lips. "You can't hold it, Transley; you can't hold it!" said one of the men. Transley hit him from the shoulder. He crumpled up and collapsed.

A mile and a half had been made safe, but the smoke was suffocatingly thick and the roar of the oncoming fire rose above the shouts of the fighters. Up galloped the water wagon; made a sharp lurch and turn, and a front wheel collapsed with the shock. The wagon went down at one corner and the barrels were dumped on the ground.

The men looked at Transley. For one moment he surveyed the situation. "Is there a chain?" he demanded. There was.

"Hit on to the tire of this broken wheel. Some of you men yank the hub out of it. Others pull grass. Pull, like hell—was after you!"

They pulled. In a minute or two Transley had the rim of the wheel flat on the ground, with a team hitched to it and a little pile of dry grass inside. Then he set fire to the little pile of grass and started the team slowly along the battle front. As they moved the burning grass in the rim set fire to the grass on the prairie underneath; the rim partly rubbed it out again as it came over, and the men were able to keep what remained in check, but as he lengthened his line Transley had to leave more and more men to beat out the fire, and had fewer to pull grass. The sacks were too wet to burn; he had to have grass to feed his moving fire-spreader.

At length he had only a teamster and himself, and his fire was going out. Transley whipped off his shirt, rolled it into a little heap, set fire to it, and ran along beside the rim, firing the little moving circle of grass inside.

It was the teamster, looking back, who saw Transley fall. He had to drop the lines to run to his assistance, and the horses, terrified by smoke and fire and the excitement of the fight, immediately bolted. The teamster took Transley in his arms and half carried, half dragged him into the safe area behind the back-fires. And a few minutes later the main fire, checked on its front, swept by on the flank and raced on up through the valley.

In riding down to the assistance of Mrs. Landson Zen found herself suddenly caught in an eddy of smoke. She did not realize at the moment that the wind had turned; she thought she must have ridden into the fire area. To avoid the possibility of being cut off by fire, and also for better air, she turned her horse to the river. All through the valley were billows of smoke, with here and there a reddish-yellow glare marking the more vicious sections of flame. Vaguely, at times, she thought she caught the shouting of men, but all the heavens seemed full of roaring.

When Zen reached the water the smoke was hanging low on it, and she drove her horse well in. Then she swung down the stream, believing that by making a detour in this way she could pass the wedge of fire that had interrupted her and get back on to the trail leading to Landson's. She was coughing with the smoke, but rode on in the confidence that presently it would lift.

It did. A whip of wind raised it like a strong arm throwing off a blanket. She sat up and breathed freely. The hot sun shone through rifts in the canopy of smoke; the blue sky looked down serene and unmoved by this outburst of the elements. Then as Zen brought her eyes back to the water she saw a man on horseback not forty yards ahead. Her first thought was that it must be one of the fire fighters, driven like herself to safety, but a second glance revealed George Drakz. For a moment she had an impulse to wheel and ride out, but even as she smothered that impulse a tinge of color rose in her cheeks that she should for a moment have entertained it. To let George Drakz think she was afraid of him would be the utmost humiliation.

She continued straight down the stream, but he had already seen her and was headed her over. In the excitement of what he had just done Drakz was less responsible than usual.

"Hello, Zen!" he said. "Mighty decent of you to ride down and meet me like this. Mighty decent, Zen!"

"I didn't ride down to meet you, Drakz, and you know it. Keep out of the way or I'll use a whip on you!"

"Oh, how naughty! Y.D. all over! Never mind, dear, I like you all the better for that. Who wants a tame horse? An' as for comin' down to meet me, what's the odds, so long as we've met?"

He had turned his horse and blocked the way in front of her. When Zen's horse came within reach Drakz caught him by the bridle.

"Will you let go?" the girl said, speaking as calmly as she could, but in a white passion. "Will you let go of that bridle, or shall I make you?"

He looked her full in the face. "Gad, but you're a stunner!" he exclaimed. "I'm glad we met—here."

She brought her whip with a biting cut around the wrist that held her bridle. Drakz winced, but did not let go.

"Just for that, young Y.D.," he hissed, "just for that we drop all formalities, so to speak."

With a dexterous spurring he brought his horse alongside and threw an arm about Zen before she could beat him off. She used her whip at short range on his face, but had not arm-room in which to land a blow. They were stirrup-deep in water, and as they struggled the horses edged in deeper still. Finding that she could not beat Drakz off Zen clutched her saddle and drove the spurs into her horse. At this unaccustomed treatment he plunged wildly forward, but Drakz's grip on her was too strong to be broken. The maneuver had, however, the effect of unhorsing Drakz. He fell in the water, but kept his grip on Zen. With his free hand he still had the reins of his own horse, and he managed also to get hold of hers. Although her horse was plunging and jumping, Drakz's strong grip on his rein kept him from breaking away.

"You fight well, Zen, d—n you—you fight well," he cried. "So you might. You played with me—you made a fool of me. We'll see who's the fool in the end." With a mighty wrench he tore her from her saddle and she found herself struggling with him in the water.

"If I put you under for a minute I guess you'll be good," he threatened. "I'll haul down you, Zen, if I have to."

"Go ahead," she challenged. "I'll drown myself, if I have to."

"Not just yet, Zen; not just yet. Afterwards you can do as you like."

In their struggles they had been getting gradually into deeper water. At this moment they found their feet carried free, and the horses began to swim for the shore. Drakz held to both reins with one hand, still clutching his victim with the other. More than once they went under water together and came up half choking.

Zen was not a good swimmer, but she would gladly have broken away and taken chances with the current. Once on land she would be at his mercy. She was using her head frantically, but could think of no device to foil him. It was not her practice to carry weapons; her whip had already gone down the stream. Presently she saw a long leather thong floating out from the saddle of Drakz's horse. It was no larger than a whip-lash; apparently it was a spare lace which Drakz carried, and which had worked loose in the struggle. It was floating close to Drakz.

"Don't let me sink, George!" she cried frantically, in sudden fright. "Save me! I won't fight any more."

"That's better," he said, drawing her up to him. "I knew you'd come to your senses."

Her hand reached the lash. With a quick motion of the arm, such as is given in throwing a rope, she had looped it once around his neck. Then, pulling the lash violently, she fought herself out of his grip. He clutched at her wildly, but could reach only some stray locks of her brown hair which had broken loose and were floating on the water.

She saw his eyes grow round and big and horrified; saw his mouth open and refuse to close; heard strange little gurgles and chokings. But she did not let go.

FIVE FIRST PLACES WON BY HONDO HIGH SCHOOL IN DISTRICT TRACK MEET

Uvalde Wins First Place by Scant Margin of 2 Points; Windrow Scores 15 Points

By taking five first, a second, two third and a fourth place Hondo High School scored 32 1/2 points at the district meet in Uvalde last Saturday for second honors. The Owls were beaten out by Uvalde High with 35 3-5 points. The Coyotes of Uvalde took two first places but by capturing numerous second and third places, especially in the field events, assembled enough points to beat out the Owls.

The best race of the meet was the 440-yard run in which Albert Haegelin came in first with Mann of Pearsall so close second that daylight could not be seen between the two runners. Hagelin traveled the distance in 54.8.

Don Windrow won the medal for high individual scorer of the meet by earning 15 points. Windrow placed first in the running broad jump, the 100- and 220-year dashes. Don won his dash events with ease, coming in several yards in the lead in the 220.

The fifth first place taken by the Owls was the mile-relay. The Hondo boys traveled the four laps in 3:47.5 to beat out Uvalde. G. Jones, anchor man of the Hondo quartette, in spite of his knee giving him trouble overtook a 10-yard lead held by Uvalde at the start of the last lap and came in a good 15 yards ahead of the Coyote runner.

HONDO BAPTIST BADGERS HAVE GOOD SEASON; WIN TWELVE, LOSE BUT EIGHT

Fast Quintettes Fall Before Scrappy Local Outfit; Devine, Yancey Among Victims

Hondo Baptist Badgers in their first year of existence enjoyed a successful basketball season. The locals won twelve out of twenty games played against all comers. It is not often that a team will win better than half its games during its first year of activity, but the Badgers ended the season with an average of 600 per cent. The locals were under the direction of Rev. Albert Nelson, pastor of the local Baptist Church, and displayed a fine team spirit. The Baptists boasted the best defense in the county and displayed a great working knowledge of the shifting-zone defense. Many times their opponents failed to score a single point during a quarter. The greatest weakness of the team was the lack of offensive plays, the Badgers having worked out but one play on the offense.

The local's claim to fame lies in their victories over Devine and Yancey High School. The Badgers were the first team to defeat the fast Medina County quintettes, stopping the Warhorses after they had scored seven victories and turning back the Yancey Tigers for the first time in the 19th game for the Tigers.

Lettermen for the 1929-30 season of the Badgers are Carter Snooks, captain; Glenn Jones, Leo Pettis, Clarence Wright, B. C. Rucker, Edward Taylor, Frank Rucker, Bradley Bailey and George Wilson. Travis Taylor, Jack Mask and Melville Smith were team members but failed to play enough quarters to letter.

The season record of the Badgers reads:

19 1st Baptist	Badgers 25
15 Knippa	Badgers 28
9 1st Baptist	Badgers 17
27 Prospect Hill	Badgers 36
23 1st Baptist	Badgers 26
25 Yancey Baptist	Badgers 8
10 Devine	Badgers 20
14 Town Team	Badgers 22
12 Lytle High	Badgers 11
24 Lytle High	Badgers 27
33 Uvalde High	Badgers 16
18 Yancey High	Badgers 19
33 Yancey High	Badgers 25
50 Devine High	Badgers 19
17 Lytle Town	Badgers 25
10 Lytle High	Badgers 14
5 Lytle High	Badgers 26
28 Aces	Badgers 22
45 Laurel Heights	Badgers 23
26 Central Baptist	Badgers 15

The Badgers will hold a called meeting in the Study of the Baptist Church Monday, April 28, at 7:30 P. M.

THE OLD VS. THE NEW IN VEGETABLE COOKERY

By CAROLINE B. KING Culinary Expert and Lecturer on Domestic Sciences.

THE old-fashioned way of cooking vegetables was to immerse them in quantities of water and boil them madly for a longer time than was at all necessary. Then we poured off the surplus water with the minerals, salts and other qualities extracted from the vegetables, and served them with their tastelessness disguised by highly seasoned sauces.

Now we know that most vegetables, especially the delicate, sweet-juiced varieties, require little water in cooking, and also that over-cooking is ruinous both to their flavor and nutritious qualities. We have studied ways to develop both the flavor and food value of these wholesome products. We have discovered for one very important thing, that sugar in correct amounts added while cooking intensifies the flavor of both fresh and canned vegetables, and in all instances increases their value as a source of human energy.

Corn Pudding is a welcome dish on any table provided it is prepared with due regard for the fact that success depends entirely upon whether the mistress of the kitchen is able to bring out the natural sweetness of the chief ingredient. To two cups of canned corn, add one canned pimiento and one small green pepper, shredded coarsely, half a small onion grated, two well-beaten eggs, two tablespoons of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, one quarter teaspoon of pepper and paprika, two tablespoons of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, and one cup of milk. Mix all the ingredients together and add two tablespoons of melted butter. Turn into a well-buttered casserole, and bake covered, in a moderate oven, half an hour. Then remove the cover and bring to a delicate brown.

Eggplant en Casserole—Place large eggplant and cut it in slices, then in cubes. Cook in enough boiling water to cover, drain well when finished. Cut small onion in slices and cook till tender in a tablespoon of butter. Add the eggplant, a cup of tomatoes, or more if the mixture seems too dry, half a cup of water, two tablespoons of sugar, one-half spoon of salt and one-quarter spoon of pepper. Cover and simmer slowly in a moderate oven half an hour.

Baked Winter Squash—Wash squash. Cut and remove seeds and pulp. Then cut the squash squares and place in a pan containing a little water. Place in moderate oven and bake until pulp is soft, basting occasionally with a little hot water and butter. When nearly done sprinkle thick with brown sugar and dot with butter. Finish baking and serve square to each person.

Sautéed Parsnips—Cook parsnips until tender in boiling water which one-half teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of sugar has been added. Drain and scrape off skin. Cut in halves lengthwise and sprinkle with sugar. Sauté in drippings to a rich brown tint.
